How to Sell Yourself for Success: Motivation, Organization and Essay Writing for the College Bound Student

Gloria Tennebown, writer and presentation skills / marketing consultant, brings humor, common sense, and inspiration to the college admission process.

Ms. Tennebown’s philosophy is “In a world where students are evaluated by grades and test scores, I want to help them tell the rest of the story. College essays, short answers and interviews provide that opportunity. Using self-evaluation to build self-esteem, students identify their strengths and use those to sell themselves for success.”

From Friendship to Bullying: The Social Side of Learning Differences

Jill Wiseman, MA, LPC, and Lower School Counselor, The Briarwood School

You send them off to school to learn the academics, but they are more interested in what happens on the playground. What can you do to help your child make friends? Ms. Wiseman will explore the social side of learning and how learning differences may affect a child's social skills. She will discuss ways to facilitate friendships and promote protective factors to deal with potential bullying.
